What is a Giclée Print?

A Giclée Print is a high quality fine art print produced in the Giclée printing method. The method uses specialist archival pigment inks and acid-free papers; creating gallery-quality inkjet prints with excellent depth of colour, longevity and stability.

Studies have shown that Giclée Prints colour vividness can last in excess of 200 years with tests by independent bodies such as Wilhelm Research and printer manufacturers such as Epson.

How Are Tam's Giclée Prints printed?

Tam's Giclee prints are printed on the finest archival papers, using the latest Epson professional Ultrachrome inks.

Compared to most high street printers, who print at 360 dpi with 2 passes (no. of times a print head passes over an area), Tam's giclee printing service is set to 1440 dpi, with 8 passes, using an Epson HDR 10-colour pigment ink system profiled for accurate colour reproduction.

Using their state-of-the-art print software, prints are sharp, detailed, and vibrant. They maximise the colour gamut for every paper they offer and capture open shadow detail, true blues and natural skin tones for every image they print.

3-level black ink technology means better grey balance, impressive mid-tones, and no colour casts, for true black and white reproduction.
